

ZION CANYON MUSIC FESTIVAL

Festival History and Vision

Beautiful Zion National Park in Southern Utah provides the backdrop for the annual Zion Canyon Music Festival, held on the last full weekend in September. The Festival fills the Zion Corridor with music. For the past seven years, the Zion Canyon Music Festival has brought together local and nationally known bands in a family-friendly, community-oriented atmosphere. The Committee looks to people like you to help us keep costs down in order to continue providing this exceptional Festival!

The Festival is held each year at the Springdale Town Park. Those who have attended the event have experienced a variety of original art, handmade musical instruments, and fine-craft vendors. These vendors have been joined in the past by local food establishments including: Wildcat Willies, Deep Creek Coffee, Pinching Gringo Tacos, Roadrunner Pizza, Thai Sapa, and Waffle Bliss. The event also includes handcrafted beer provided by the Utah Brewers Cooperative including Wasatch and Squatters Breweries!

The Festival is designated a “Leave No Trace” festival and was also designated in 2014 a “plastic-free zone”! Our Festival also promotes the development of renewable energy resources in Southern Utah and advancing Springdale’s solar power projects. Springdale currently has 96.4kW of solar power generation installed and the Festival is one way the Town promotes the development of renewable energy in Southern Utah. The Festival utilizes both on-site and mobile solar arrays to offset the power needs of the Festival. The Town is continually seeking ways to install more solar arrays to benefit the Town and its residents.

Southern Utah is home to world-class hiking, canyoneering, rock climbing, and mountain biking. In addition to renewable energy, the Festival continues to focus on outdoor recreation and the precious outdoor resources found in the Zion National Park area.

In the past, Festival attendance reached 4,000 people during our two-day event. The Festival has continued to grow in quality, popularity and attendance. We expect this year's festival to be the best year ever. Sponsoring the Festival is a great opportunity to connect Festival patrons to your name and business in a family-friendly environment supporting our community!

While we have implemented a small admission charge to grow the quality of the Festival, we still need help from friends like you to achieve our goal with providing professional live music to the Zion Canyon Community. We encourage you to join the Music Festival Committee by offering your sponsorship support that will enhance the cultural climate of Southern Utah and promote our abundant outdoor opportunities. Sponsorship gives you the opportunity to not only support an excellent community event and promote the arts in Southern Utah, but also market and advertise your business locally.

Any donations are greatly appreciated and are tax deductible.

See you in September! It's going to be a great.
